

Selected Topics in Economics 4490F 550

Course: Macro Economics

Instructor: Dr. Ozden Sungur

This seminar course will introduce students to household portfolio analysis, an area of research that is of great interest to researchers in economics and finance alike. The assigned course readings will provide empirical evidence on household portfolios across a number of countries for comparative analysis. These empirical findings will be examined along two dimensions: participation decision and portfolio allocation. Our discussions will also reflect the special emphasis placed on certain demographic groups in the literature, in particular the rich and the elderly.